

Luz Yadira Bravo Gallego is a MD and Specialist in Paediatrics (Cauca University of Popayán – Colombia, 2005 and 2010 respectively), Master in Paediatric Infectious Diseases (Complutense University of Madrid UCM, 2014) and Specialist in Immunology (2019). Currently, she is the Medical Advisor of the European Reference Network for Pediatric Transplantation (ERN-TRANSPLANTChild) and belongs to the Lymphocyte Pathophysiology Group at La Paz Biomedical Research Institute (IdiPAZ) and the Rare Diseases of the Immune System Group, at the Spanish Rare Disease Network Research Center (CIBERER).

Dr. Bravo Gallego is an expert in the clinical and immunological evaluation of the host-pathogen interaction in several clinical scenarios, with particular dedication to the analysis of the immune competence in pediatric patients that receive a Hematopoietic and Stem Cell Transplantation, in which she is focusing her PhD project.